telc Deutsch B2·C1 Medizin Fachsprachprüfung is based fully on the key points agreed upon at the 87th Conference of Health Ministers held in June, 2014. Besides providing proof of your general German language skills at level B2, successful completion of this examination also documents your specialist language skills at level C1. Several German federal states accept the exam as language proof for full registration as a doctor in Germany. As a successful candidate, you demonstrate your ability to communicate appropriately in a number of professional situations, such as

- conducting doctor-patient consultations
- writing short doctor's letters
- presenting patient cases to colleagues

The German language certificate for physicians telc Deutsch B2·C1 Medizin proves, for example, your ability to

- write doctor's letters telc Deutsch B2 Medizin Zugangsprüfung is for doctors who live in German federal states requiring proof of professional language ability at the B2 level in order to take the mandatory language test at their local State Chamber of Physicians. This examination tests general everyday language used in a medical context, such as

- understanding spoken and written texts
- writing less formal pieces of communication (emails)
- communicating with patients and their family members

The German language certificate for nursing staff telc Deutsch B1·B2 Pflege proves your ability to
